THE WOMAN I AM TODAY

For 13 years, I strived to overcome the effects of the 2 mental illnesses that I have been diagnosed with: schizo-affective disorder and PTSD. In the past, I suffered with suicidal thoughts, but I have learned to love myself and that we are all beautiful and worthy of living.

I would like to speak publicly to help girl learn to love themselves as I have. I would like to make a difference because I have overcome so much. I spent my life being alone and not communicating with people. There are too many girls like that and I would like to make a difference in my life and help others to do the same.

I want to be someone my daughter will be proud of.
